Dear Dr. Lederberg:

I trust that you will recall that I am the editor of the publication in which the talk you gave at the IEEE/Franklin Institute convocation will be published.

I am writing you to inform you that there has been a great deal of interest generated within the IEEE as a result of this forthcoming text; so much so that the IEEE has asked us to address a broader audience than the Proceedings of the IEEE readership that we had planned on. The Proceedings publication would have had an audience of approximately 40,000. By turning this text into a hardbound IEEE centennial book, we can address the entire IEEE membership, a more diversified audience. Since our original understanding had been that your paper was to have appeared in a special issue of the Proceedings, by means of this letter I would like to inform you of this change and trust that it meets with your approval. ✓

You will be receiving your edited remarks sometime next month for your final review. I hope you will be as pleased with the IEEE publication as I know I will be.

Sincerely yours,

Harlow Freitag
